Chromolithography is a lithographic art used to print colored designs, imitating above all tempera - based colors. From the second half of the nineteenth century, chromolithography images begin to appear printed on sheets of paper. They were used for decorating objects (furniture, boxes, fans, and containers for various products). The printed images were often cut out and used for numerous pastime activities (for example, decorating albums and notebooks).

Our first CHROMO collection for d  coupage was created from Calambour collection (over 50.000 chromolithographic figurines) with 8 sheets of paper printed with a technique that exalts and maximizes their color, while respecting the originals from 1800's in all splendor.
